The RiverHouse History

The RiverHouse, a wine place that skirts the shore of the Mighty Mississippi and is constructed four feet above the historic flood level is a dream come true for Derek and Deb Wilson. We created a plan and followed through in 2014 with the thought "If we build it, they will come." We wanted a place that reflected the nearby history but at the same time current with today's lifestyle. With a floor design from an old bridge in Maine, chandelier, harvest table, barrell ceiling entry, along with a unique bar the "Rustic Chic" decor was introduced. The RiverHouse sits just north of the Thebes Bridge, a truss bridge built in 1905 that spans 4,000 feet and still carries regular rail traffic. Directly across the river, nestled among trees on the Illinois Bluff, sits the Thebes courthouse, which served as the Alexander County Courthouse from 1848 to 1860. The story is told that Abraham Lincoln practiced law there and Dred Scott was housed during his trial in St. Louis. While watching the barge traffic you can keep an eye out for eagles and deer, or just imagine what the river was like when Mark Twain wrote about this section of the river in 1876. The RiverHouse is a family venture. Our daughter, Lauren, manages day to day operations, scheduling and hiring. The RiverHouse hosts guests Thursday through Sunday with special events scheduled by appointment. As the mighty Mississippi just keeps on rolling along...The RiverHouse invites you to join us. "Where the road ends, the river bends, and conversations blend."
